Wake Forest University Brings you the Top 10 reasons to use Back-Up Care

10. You have a new baby (congratulations!) and need care while you transition back to work.

9. Your child’s school or provider is closed for a break, holiday or professional day or inclement weather.

8. Your parents (who live out of state) have a regular in-home care provider who is out sick or is on vacation.

7. Your workload and deadlines require you to work late and you need in-home care for your child(ren) for evening or weekend hours.

6. Your mother-in-law is in the hospital and you would like someone to be with her during the day.

5. Your stay-at-home spouse is called in for jury duty, is not feeling well or has an appointment.

4. You are in between regular child care arrangements.

3. Your spouse (or other adult relative) is recovering from an illness or injury and needs additional assistance while they recover.

2. Your child is ill and cannot attend their regular care program or school.

1. Your regular in-home care provider is out sick, taking a vacation or unavailable.
